

LOGLINE :

In what was supposed to be an exciting time at the forest preserve, the nature video blogger runs into a scary situation that leaves her on the ground, bleeding to death.

SYNOPSIS :

Tanya Lopez, a nature photographer. She's known and respected in her community and is taking her career to the next level. She is transitioning to video blogging like everyone in her community, capitalizing on her talent.

One cold, bright day, Tanya is excited to start her very first on-site video blog. She packs her equipment and drives to the nearest forest preserve, capturing the beautiful nature in the middle of the winter season.

Tanya walks around the preserve, enjoying her surroundings, and finds the perfect spot to vlog. As the blogger sets up her video equipment, she is startled upon hearing a familiar sound that she did not anticipate. She quietly walks away to investigate and is petrified at what she's witnessing. She is shaking and runs swiftly away from danger, but she fails. Will she survive the hellish nightmare that she's about to endure?